Our Lord wasn't put in the world to eat rice and mop his head; he was put in the world to free the slaves. Spanish: Nuestro Señor no vino al mundo para comer arroz y mojarse la cabeza; vino a liberar a los esclavos. Filipino: Sa tamang panahon, kumain ng ipakbaba. Hindi mahalaga ang pakain ang suklat at pakutin ang kulha ang mga kausap. This collection contains three novels, of which one, The Fountainhead (English translation), was written by C. S. Forrester and published in 1932. The author is not known to the general public, except as a member of the group of American writers known as the 'Cranbrook group', named after their university, where he was a student. His name is C. S. G. Davies. The other two, The Power Game (English translation) and The Prince of Darkness (English translation), are novels by J. Bayet Meurisse. Published in 1948 and 1954, they are part of the "vintage" (very old, former-fashioned) line of works by this rather obscure but popular French author. The first story in the collection, "The Surgeon," is by J. Bayet Meurisse, a French writer who did not belong to the 'Cranbrook group' of American writers, though he studied at their university. The Fountainhead is the first of the three novels, the other two being The Power Game and The Prince of Darkness. The Fountainhead is not a bestseller in France. The Fountainhead is one of the most expensive books in the French collection, costing 50 francs, or about ten cents. The title of the collection is a reference to its contents. Contents: The Fountainhead The Power Game The Prince of Darkness The stories can be read individually, but they were written as part of a collection. Thus they are a single work, unlike, for example, the three 82157476af
